A Word From Our Secretary

Please remember that show recommendations from the NCHA and Stay -at-Home orders from Pennsylvania & New Jersey can change at any time. We will keep you posted on our website and Facebook page as this situation develops.

We look forward to seeing everyone again July 25-26th at Dreampark Equestrian Center in New Jersey. Please remember to call Jack Werner 267-246-6511 by Monday July 20th for stall reservations! Please note there will be no Friday night work session at this show. Lets make this another great show and stay safe out there.

Horse Rider DEBUNKING 4 COMMON HORSE MYTHS

SANDY COLLIER / EDITOR JENNIFER FORSBERG MEYER

Do you still believe these false notions? Clinician and world champion rider/trainer Sandy Collier debunks four common horsemanship myths.

MYTH "Oh, that's just his bad side."

Have you ever said this, referring to your horse's tendency to be a little stiffer going one direction than the other? If so, you're believing a myth.

Clinician and world champion trainer Sandy Collier says it's actually not true that every horse has a "good" and a "bad" side. In her popular training book, Reining Essentials, she debunks this and many other myths.

"It's not a question of good and bad," she writes. "It's a question of hollow and stiff."

That's because most horses are asymmetrical physically in a way that makes it easier to bend going to their right (their hollow side) and harder to bend going to their left (their stiff side).

She notes that riders tend to think they need to work the so-called bad side—the stiff side—more. But in reality, you need to work the hollow side equally as much, or it can become overbent and "noodly."

"Work each of your horse's sides equally," she recommends, "giving intelligent consideration to the tendencies of that side and how to compensate for them."

Let's look at some more myth-busting from the horsewoman who's still the only female to win the open division of the World Championship Snaffle Bit Futurity....

MYTH: Pulling on your horse's mouth will make him hard-mouthed.

REALITY: Not necessarily, says Sandy. It depends on how you pull. "A horse must learn to 'take a pull' in order to be trained," she says. "The key thing is when and how you pull—plus, even more important, when you release."

Specifically, if you pull at the correct moment—without jerking—and release the instant your horse responds, you're training, not toughening his mouth.

And, as Sandy stresses, always remember that it's not the pulling itself that educates your horse...it's the properly timed release.

MYTH: It's better to use 'body English' (leaning) to guide your horse than to use your reins.

REALITY: This just causes your horse to try to compensate under you, which can unbalance him.

"I run into this a lot in my clinics," says Sandy. "For some reason, people think the less they use their reins, the better, so they try to throw their weight around to steer their horse."

She notes that although how you sit in the saddle is important, "you're not doing your horse any favors by purposely leaning on top of him.

"Remember, your reins are there for a purpose," she adds. "It's OK to use them!"

Try these reins! Cashel Adjustable 8' Rein.

MYTH: You need to worry about where your horse's feet are when you say 'whoa.'

REALITY: This can actually mess up your stops.

"I tell my students not to worry about this," says Sandy. "Because if you do, you'll be so focused on that that you won't be riding your horse all the way to the stop, and the latter is far more important."

She goes on to explain that the ability to feel in the seat of your pants where your horse's feet are at any given moment is something you develop after a lot of time in the saddle.

"In the meantime," she adds, "just take a deep breath, let it out steadily, and say 'whoa' at the bottom of that breath—and you'll almost always be asking for the stop when your horse's body is in the best position to slide."

Horse Rider SIX How To TIPS FOR SWIMMING WITH YOUR HORSE JENNIFER FORSBERG MEYER

Swimming with your horse is great fun. I've done it several times with different horses over the years and have always had a blast. That feeling of half riding, half floating above your horse is exhilarating. Plus, in the warmest temperatures, you'll find your horse just might enjoy it as much as you do.

I asked trainer Christy Wood, who has plenty of opportunity to take horses swimming in the lovely Three Rivers area of California where she lives, to share some of her expertise. If you're thinking of enjoying this refreshing activity sometime during the summer, here's how to maximize both fun and safety.

1. Plan Your Swimming Hole

It may be a river or lake near your home, or perhaps a horse-friendly ocean beach you can haul to. You'll need water that's deep enough to prompt swimming (that is, over your horse's withers), but not too rough, swift, or cold. The time of year can play a part.

"I live on the North Fork of the Kaweah River, and I usually don't try entering the water until late June," says Christy. "Before then, the runoff from snow melt creates strong currents and too-cold temperatures."

A sandy bottom is ideal. "Or you can remove problematic rocks by hand," suggests Christy. "Take friends, and make a rock-moving party out of it."

2. Prep Your Horse

"Don't make your first time in the water your 'swim meet," advises Christy. Allow your horse the opportunity to feel comfortable in water up to his belly before you ask him to swim in deeper water.

3. Plan Your Gear

Bareback is ideal, or you can use an inexpensive bareback pad to alleviate some of the slipperiness. "I always ride in a snaffle bit," says Christy, "and I add a neck rope in case I lose my balance at any point. A nylon bridle is best, but a well-oiled leather one can work as well."

A halter with reins attached is another option if your horse is controllable that way. Whatever you use, your horse's head needs to be free to move to enable swimming, which means no tie-downs or martingales (which have actually been known to cause drownings).

As for you, the only essential gear is a safety helmet—because although water would cushion a fall, there's the risk of getting hit by a churning hoof.

4. Don't (Ever!) Swim Alone

Take at least one friend with you. Also, everyone in your swim party must know how to swim and be competent enough riders to control their horses while still having fun.

5. Pay Attention

Go slowly at first, and give your horse time to adjust to the feeling of buoyancy. He may plunge a bit at first, so grab mane or neck rope and be prepared. Keep a safe distance from others in your party and stay alert.

"If you get to giggling and not watching out for the other swimmers, you could have a few collisions," cautions Christy. "That's another reason why a snaffle or hackamore, with their milder direct-rein effect, are preferable to a shank bit."

6. Don't Overdo It

"Swimming can be exhausting for both horses and riders," says Christy. "So use common sense—you want your horse to have a good experience with it, especially the first time."

DCNR Seeking Online Public Input on Pennsylvania's Public and Private Forests

Harrisburg, PA -- Today, Department of Conservation and Natural Resources Secretary Cindy Adams Dunn invited public input in an online surveyOpens In A New Window helping DCNR chart the future course for forestlands in Pennsylvania.

"As the department moves forward in developing a new strategic plan, those who appreciate, work in, or recreate in Pennsylvania's forests have a remarkable opportunity to shape the future management and sustainability of Pennsylvania's forest resources," Dunn said. "I encourage all to become a part of this state's rich forest planning heritage by completing the survey."

Beginning July 1 and continuing through August 31, the survey takes approximately 10 minutes to complete. Stakeholders, outdoors enthusiasts, and others who visit and enjoy approximately 17 million acres of forestlands in Pennsylvania will be asked to weigh in on perceived individual forest use, and personal values placed on forests. DCNR is in the process of writing a new strategic plan, designed to set its mission and overarching goals.

It guides how the department provides leadership in forest management and conservation on both public and private lands in urban and rural areas.

Reflected in the public survey are questions designed to shape how the department: Considers opinions and attitudes of citizens about forests and the agency's work

Steers its mission, goals, objectives and the methods used to achieve them

Weighs attitudes and opinions on:

Forest restoration, watershed protection, plants, wildlife, and biodiversity Working forests and the resources that come from them such as oil, gas, and timber Recreational activities such as hiking, biking, and motorized Climate change

Forest education, outreach, and understanding of forest management practice and wood products Value of trees and forest products

Details on Pennsylvania's state forestlands and 20 state forest districts can be found at the DCNR website. MEDIA CONTACT: Terry Brady, 717-877-6315
