A WORD FROM OUR SECRETARY

It's always sad to get to the end of the show season. This year it's especially bittersweet as we say goodbye to Shartlesville and Mountain Springs Arena. We thank Rich Miller for his many many years of support and wish him all the best. As change is inevitable, we turn our sights to 2020 and look forward to a new show season at Bloomsburg, PA and Dream Park, NJ.

Many many thanks to all our members who have donated and given sponsorships throughout the year. We couldn't do this without your continued support. You all are invaluable and so appreciated!

See pages 4-5 for an article on Navicular Syndrome, and some of the advances that are making it easier to diagnose and deal with lameness.

We'll be turning our attention to seasonal changes and prepping for winter in next month's newsletter.

Voting for officers & board members will also be coming up before you know it. Please let us know if you'd like to nominate anyone for a position!

We'd like to put out a call for help: we've lost our photographers, and would love it if you would be willing to share some pictures with us. Post to Facebook, email to info@pchacutting.com, drop them in the mail, text them to Pankey at 207-590-1034 or Joanne, whatever is easiest for you. Any time you take a picture and it makes you smile, or is simply a good show, horse or farm photo, we'd really appreciate you sharing. We will give credit on the pictures, so if you text them, please give her your name and whatever photo information you'd like in the caption.

Good luck to all those headed to Congress,

Joanne Thayer

WHEN YOU PAY FOR A LESSON

When you pay for a lesson or training, you aren't buying an hour of my time.

You're paying for thousands of hours of sweat, struggle, success and tears.

You're buying injuries, mistakes, and revelations.

You're buying nights awake thinking about a horse or student I need to help more.

You're buying hours of hauling hay, mucking stalls and grooming, of carefully checking your horse over like it was my own.

You're paying for my further education, because I still take lessons as frequently as possible.

You're paying for my care, concern, over dinner conversation, and you inevitably become a central part of my life.

You can't put a price on education, or personal development, or the bliss of finally being "with" a horse.

Thank you for sharing with me, teaching me, and letting me teach you, while I put food on my table and hay in my barn with the most fulfilling job ever.

NAVICULAR SYNDROME IS NO LONGER THE END OF THE ROAD FOR HORSES

by Katie Navarra and Michelle Anderson, published on thehorse.com

Equine lameness associated with navicular syndrome can cause major frustration and expense for horse owners. When a horse isn't sound, we fret over his long-term well-being and lament not being able to compete, train, or trail ride.

What Is Navicular Syndrome?

So-called navicular or caudal heel syndrome is one cause of lameness that can appear in horses of any breed or discipline. It can be limited to one limb; however, it most commonly affects both front hooves, causing bilateral lameness. While veterinarians have documented it in the rear feet, these cases are very rare.

Horse people in general tend to lump all heel pain under the "navicular" umbrella, even though other issues might be to blame—hence the term "navicular syndrome," says Dr. Tracy Turner.

It's an overly simple name for a complex condition that we now know is most accurately described as podotrochlosis or -podotrochleitis, because it can involve more of the podotrochlear apparatus than just the navicular bone, such as the navicular bursa or associated soft-tissue structures (e.g., the deep digital flexor tendon [DDFT] and collateral ligament of the distal interphalangeal joint [DIP or coffin joint]).

"It's important to make this point because a more specific diagnosis allows for more specific treatment, and there are lots of different structures that may be injured in the pain syndrome," he says.

Veterinarians believe navicular is caused by mechanical stress and strain due to the constant pressure between the navicular bone and DDFT, which leads to the degeneration of those and other structures that make up the podotrochlear apparatus. Poor foot conformation, such as a long toe and low heel, increases this stress and might potentiate development of the condition.

The result is lameness, which can become chronic. "It is characterized by shortness of stride, toe-landing, pain from the center third of the frog," says Turner.

Early on these horses might present with a shortened stride right out of their stalls or while warming up, says Dr. Duncan Peters. "In more chronic cases, the horse that used to have a longer stride will become choppy and less fluid, because the horse is stabbing the toe to take the pressure off the back of the leg," he says, describing the syndrome's progression.

While any horse could develop podotrochlosis, research shows certain breeds, such as Thoroughbreds, Quarter Horses, and Warmbloods, are more at risk, and that it's most commonly diagnosed in mature horses from 4 to 15 years old. Because of the relationship between hoof angles and the podotrochlear apparatus structures, hoof care, as well as conformation, can also contribute to the condition. Strain and sports-related injury from highly physical disciplines requiring hard turns, fast stops, lateral movement, and jumping, can also compound the problem, Peters says.

Initial signs can include the dressage horse that doesn't want to lengthen or extend the trot, the hunter who starts knocking rails or stopping before jumps, or the horse that becomes unbalanced or nods its head when asked to trot a small circle, Peters says.

Better Imaging Has Led to Better Understanding of Navicular Syndrome in Horses

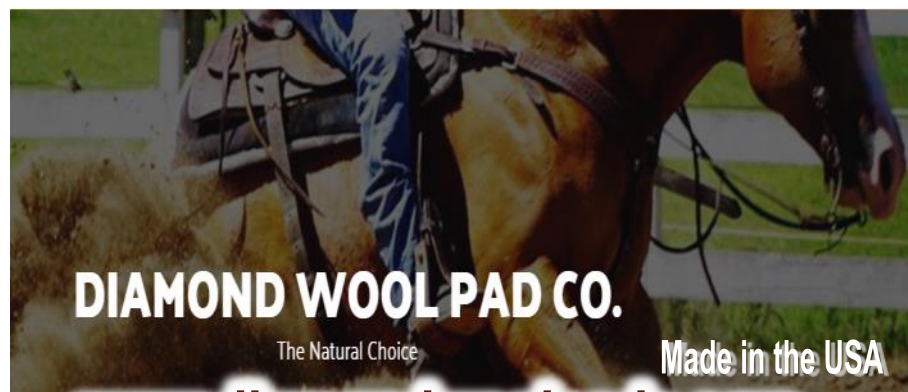

There's no cure for this condition; rather, it's about managing affected horses' comfort. In recent years the prognosis for podotrochlosis has improved significantly due to the increased use of magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) and better communication between veterinarians and farriers to determine what is best for the horse, says Dr. Craig S. Lesser, an associate veterinarian in Rood & Riddle Equine Hospital's podiatry department, in Lexington, Kentucky.

New therapies have also emerged that could be invaluable for managing these horses and returning them to work.

"The term navicular terrifies people," says Lesser. "I try to avoid using navicular in exchange for what the true culprit of injury is. However, it doesn't mean the end of a horse's athletic performance."
